No Top or Bottom Rail. Won't Sag or Bag. Costs Less.

This cut showing the "Old" and the "New" poultry fence emphasizes the beauty, simplicity and economical points in TRIMESH. Note that in the latter there are no top or base rail boards, no overhead netting and that but two posts (16 feet apart) are used.

FARMERS UNION BRANCH

Some of the precautions we take in producing "Quality" Milk.

1. Our herd is tuberculin tested and the animals are kept in a healthy condition.
2. We keep the hind quarters and udders of our cows clipped, thus eliminating the hair from the milk.
3. The milker wears a clean white suit when milking and handling the milk.
4. The cows are thoroughly brushed and the udders washed before each milking.
5. We use the Gurler Sanitary Milking pail, thus doing away with any dirt that might "get past" our other precautions.
6. The milk is bottled in sterilized bottles and delivered in a closed wagon.

The local ball team was defeated at San Jose Saturday by the fast High team by a score of 8 to 3. Our boys, with the exception of the fourth inning put up a stellar performance, but five scores in that one turn gave the game to the Joseans. The lack of coaching is plainly seen when it comes to quick field work and base running. Several of the weaker teams having dropped out of the league gave our team little chance of practice before meeting the fastest aggregation of either league. Several changes in the line-up are contemplated which will probably strengthen the infield.

Entertained for Guests

Dr. and Mrs. W. I. Merrill entertained Friday evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Fernald, of South Paris, Maine, who spent about ten days here.

The first feature of the entertainment was making animals from chewing gum, in relief form, on a card. A few of the animals could be recognized without seeing their names; H. C. Smith receiving the award of the judges for the most lifelike, and Mrs. J. C. Ainsley the consolation prize which was a whole package of gum with which to experiment.

Rook and 500 were played and were followed by dainty refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Fernald left Monday afternoon for Oakland to visit Mrs. Fernald's mother, before returning to the East. They have been looking for a location in California and may come back at some future time to remain.

Interesting Speaker

Prof. Charles Alexander of Los Angeles gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on the immortal colored poet, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, at the High School auditorium Wednesday morning. During his talk he gave a number of Dunbar's poems illustrative of the poet's genius. In closing Mr. Alexander gave one of his own poems which contains much substance for thought. It is given here.

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor;
Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn,
Or walked in the pride of wealth secure.
But whether I live an honest man
And hold my integrity firm in my clutch,
I tell you brother, plain as I am,
It matters much.

It matters little how long I stay
In the world of sorrow, sin and care;
Whether in youth I am called away
Or live till my bones and pate are bare.
But whether I do the best I can
To soften the weight of adversity's touch
On the faded cheek of my fellowman,
It matters much.

It matters little where be my grave.
Or on the land or on the sea;
By purling brook or 'neath stormy wave,
It matters little or naught to me.
But whether the angel, Death, comes down
And marks my brow with His loving touch,
As one that shall wear the victor's crown,
It matters much.

What's the Matter with Michigan?

Oh! Michigan, my Michigan,

Oh! Michigan, my Michigan,

To show your liberal taste.

Oh! Michigan, my Michigan,
We had a Michigan day,
To see the things from Michigan,
They were signs: Keep off the grass.

Oh! Michigan, my Michigan,
Of graft you were afraid,
You keep your mighty dollars
In your great iron safe.

GETTING UNDER COVER

HOW SOLDIERS ON FIRING LINE "DIG THEMSELVES IN."

When the Least Exposure Means Death Men Burrow Into the Earth in Record Time—Use All Sorts of Tools.

In the reports of the war in Europe it is frequently stated that the advance lines of the armies threw up intrenchments, and it is difficult for the ordinary reader to understand how this is done, for to him anything like a fortification appears to be a matter of considerable time and labor, which could not be accomplished with the enemy raining shot and shell. What these protections are and how they are formed is clearly explained in the special war issue of the Scientific American.

The advancing line may have suffered great losses, or the ammunition may be running low. At all events, it finds itself unable to gain ground to the front. To retreat would be fatal. It must remain where it is—some of the men find natural cover, but many must provide artificial protection from the enemy's rifle fire. The men are lying down as flatly as they can. To rise, even to a kneeling position, means death or a disabling wound. The necessity for cover under these circumstances caused men to devise the lying-down trench, sometimes called the skirmishers' trench. It gives cover from rifle fire to a man lying down, but is absolutely no protection from shrapnel bullets. The height of the parapet should not exceed one foot. The trench itself is about two and a half feet wide and about six feet long. It can be constructed by one man in soft ground, using the portable intrenching tools, in about thirty minutes. Under fire, as outlined in the foregoing, the man being compelled to remain in the prone position, he can mask himself from view in from ten to fifteen minutes and complete the trench in 40 to 45 minutes. In this position, and in view of the small number of portable intrenching tools carried by the company, the man would be obliged to use his knife bayonet to loosen the earth and the cover of his meat can to shovel it in front of him. One of the methods of working suggested by the text books is to dig a trench 18 inches wide as far back as the knees; roll into it and dig 12 inches wide alongside of it and down to the feet; then roll into the second cut and extend the first one back to the feet. This trench was seldom used in the Manchurian war. The best that can be said for it is that men can obtain slight cover under a hot fire with a minimum of casualties because it involves less digging, and they are partially protected from the very beginning of the work.

Locating the Trouble.

The floorwalker said to the manager of the shoe department:

"I had the doggondest time with my furnace this morning."

"What was wrong with it?"

"I couldn't get a bit of heat in the dining room, and I couldn't understand it."

"What did you do?"

"I went down into the cellar and took off a part of the pipe, but that was all right."

"Huh!"

"And then I examined the check damper and that was all right."

"Well!"

"Then I looked at the draft and that was all right."

"Well, well!"

"Finally, after working about an hour I found out what the trouble was."

"What was it?"

"The dining room register was turned off."—Louisville Times.

Wellington's Wounded.

It is difficult to realize the callousness towards the sick and wounded against which Wellington struggled in the Peninsula. One evening at dinner he heard that at a post several miles away a large number of sick soldiers were lying in the open, exposed to the weather. He rode promptly to the place, found the sick in the plight described, while the healthy officers were in comfortable houses, and was told by the commanding officer that there was no accommodation for the sick. He instantly arranged in detail for the billeting of the sick in those houses; but suspecting what might follow, paid a surprise visit next night, and found that the invalids had again been turned out into the open. Wellington immediately reinstated them, arrested the officers, and had them tried and dismissed for disobedience.

Neighborhood Melody.

"Please, ma'am," said the little girl from next door, "mother wants to know if you will lend her your new mechanical tune player this afternoon."

"What an extraordinary idea! Is she going to give a dance?"

"No, ma'am. We're tired of dancing to it. She wants to keep it quiet for a couple of hours so that the baby can sleep."

SOUTH PACIFIC UTOPIA

TAHITI, the largest island of the Society group, and by many travelers believed the most beautiful in any sea, lies nearly south of Hawaii and about seventeen degrees south of the equator, writes E. T. Allen in American Forestry. First touched by Portuguese and Spanish navigators, it was described to Europe by Wallis (1767) and Bougainville (1768). They gave such a lively account of the beauty of both island and people, and of what they considered the idyllic perfection of its semiwild, semideveloped society, that much was written, especially in philosophical France, to argue that here was proof of the necessity for return to nature by the human race.

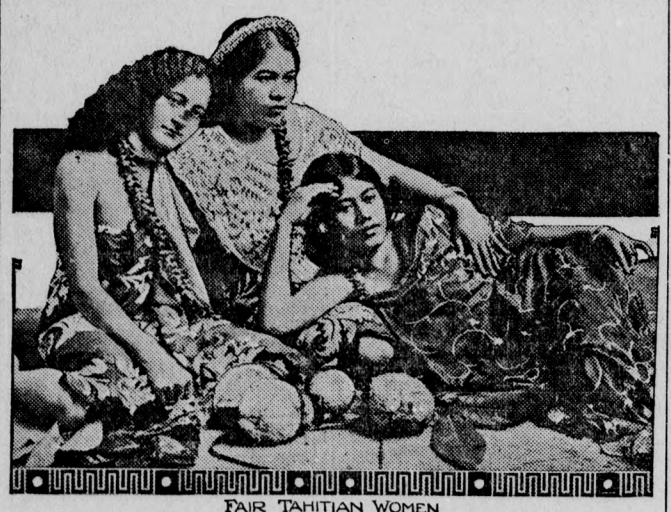
Bougainville named it New Cytherea. His companion, the naturalist Commerson, called it Utopia and wrote extravagantly of the virtues which he said flourished because the natives had no conventional restraint.

Cook and Forster's visits soon followed (1769 to 1774), bringing fuller information, and in 1788 England sent Lieutenant Bligh in the Bounty to get breadfruit for introduction into her tropical colonies. How his crew mutinied later, put back to Tahiti, sailed from there again with a party of native men and women, and disappeared from the world until found long after on Pitcairn island, where they founded an isolated colony that exists today, is perhaps better known than any other episode in Polynesian history.

Of Aryan ancestry, practically or wholly escaping Mongol or Negroid infusion by their exodus from the mainland in the remote past, the Tahitians were and are still about what would be expected of a people much like southern Europeans, but who have been isolated for ages under all the passionate influences of the tropics.

"The Garden of Eden."

Rainbow colored fish play through the coral along the sea wall at your feet, the placid green lagoon meets a skyline of palms on either hand, and seaward, beyond a tiny palm covered islet where a queen once had her fortress, the surf rolls creaming on the barrier reef from the blue tropical ocean, rippling in the soft fresh trades. Behind the town, itself hidden in verdure, green slopes rise quickly to splintered volcanic peaks nearly eight thousand feet high, carved by precipitous valleys with countless flashing waterfalls. Melville wrote that the ineffable repose and beauty of the Tahitian landscape was such that every object struck him like something seen in a dream, and he could scarcely believe such scenes had real existence. "Often," said Bougainville, "I thought I was walking in the Garden of Eden."



FAIR TAHITIAN WOMEN

Papeete is the only town, but the fertile level shores of the island are so thickly populated as to form almost a continuous village along the road that skirts the beach for its circumference of nearly one hundred miles. Yet there is practically no open land except in the uninhabited mountains. Houses and villages are beneath endless groves of cocoanuts, breadfruit, mangoes, oranges, banyans and bamboo, with occasional ornamental exotics from other tropical lands. Alligator pears, native "chestnuts," mummy apples and bananas, are in almost every doorway. Except for two small sugar plantations, a few half-hearted cotton patches, and small clearings for taro, yams and other vegetables, there is no farming as we know it. Copra and vanilla are the island crops.

Work Is Not a Worry.

On the whole, however, industry has small part in the daily life of the inhabitants. Very little work suffices to procure all that is essential where nature supplies food and shelter. The writer once asked a native to bring him some fish.

"Why don't you catch your own fish?" was the response.

"That isn't the question. I'll give you a dollar for a good string of fish," was parried with the offer as riposte.

The answer to this was unanswerable and final: "I don't need any dollar."

Such is island philosophy. The sea will always provide fish, the land all other actual requirements, and since this will be as true in the future as today, why trouble to lay up for one's children? Even tobacco and coffee are homegrown, so only imported luxuries require effort to obtain. Most of the real work of the island, such as curing vanilla, is done by Chinese who value money for its own sake. They bake the bread, run the restaurants, and own most of the small stores.

Nevertheless the natives are splendid people physically, no doubt an inheritance from their warlike and athletic past. The men are often well over six feet and tremendously muscular. The women are erect, graceful, beautifully formed, and often very handsome. Their brown eyes are unusually fine. Their black hair is long and waving.

Polynesian races differ slightly in color, that of pure Tahitians varying also with caste and exposure, but the commonest type is an olive gold not darker in shade than the skins of Chinese and Japanese, but warmer and less yellowish. Their features are pleasing and contain nothing Negroid or Mongolian.

The typical native dress is the pareu, a bright colored patterned cotton cloth much like the Burmese sarong, twisted by the men around the waist and by the women around the breast. The latter, however, rarely wear it away from home, except bathing or fishing, without a loose over dress. The men also are more and more coming to regard the pareu as informal, comfortable for home and work wear, but to be replaced by coat and pants on dress occasions. These customs vary much with the distance from town. Flowers constitute the chief adornment, worn in wreaths and singly over the ear. Carriers come in from the mountain valleys with loads of plantain, naked except for a loin cloth but with garlands of ferns and flowers.

Are a Social People.

The chief Tahitian characteristics are social. Feasting, dancing and singing are always in progress, usually on a wholesale scale. The entire village participates on the slightest excuse. Anything that can be done alone is unpopular. Even in fishing, the single venturer is regarded as a pothunter and no sportsman, the gentlemanly way being to set a net in the lagoon and invite the neighbors to a drive, affording much noise and frolic, or to organize a deep-sea expedition for albicore.

In several stays on the island the writer was never allowed to fish with hook and line from a single canoe because, while all right for a commoner who needs fish, it is not the thing for "quality" to do. The visitor is struck with the invariable good nature of the people. They rarely quarrel, drunk or sober. Violence is practically unknown. Murders are so infrequent as to be little more than traditional and even fighting is extremely rare.

Like all Polynesians, they are wonderful swimmers, and probably excel all others as canoemen. Whereas, in Hawaii the canoes seen today are purely utilitarian, the Tahitian retains his navigating ancestors' love for naval architecture. Racing canoes carrying 20 paddlers or more are built with great ceremony and beating of drums and carefully kept from the weather in houses constructed by the district.

These canoes have beautiful lines and are incredibly fast. So are also the sailing canoes, which carry tremendous canvas and are trimmed by the gymnastics of the crew, who balance themselves on lateral spars extending from the side. They also have outriggers, but in racing these are not allowed to bury themselves and so impede progress.

SAM AND WATERLOO

By EUGENE TOWNSEND.

"I haven't any prejudice against you because you are in business, Mr. Butts," repeated the earl of Waterbury. "None whatever. I understand that the United States Watch company is a prosperous and honorable concern. Pray put that idea out of your head. I myself am connected with a farm—er, products institution."

In point of fact the earl of Waterbury was the head of a model dairy, and therefore could have no such objection against Sam Butts of Binghampton, New York, formerly, but now domiciled in London.

"But as for your marrying Lady Muriel, Mr. Butts, it is out of the question," the earl continued. "You are an American. I say nothing against you on that score. If you could have had the choice you would, of course, have been born an Englishman. Far be it from me to penalize a man for a misfortune of birth. But, sir, you cannot understand the English spirit. You are ignorant of our sports. Only yesterday you remarked in my presence that you hoped Surrey would score a run in its eighth inning. Mr. Butts, there are only two innings in cricket, and Surrey did not score a run, it scored 237 runs. In short, sir, you have not the essential temperament to admit of an instant's consideration of your preposterous request. Besides, I intend that Lady Muriel shall marry Mr. Charles Stephen Langholme. Good-day, sir."

Sammy had known that it was a forlorn hope. He and Lady Muriel had been in love with each other for six months, ever since they had met, in fact. Mr. Butts moved in good society; he was a presentable young man, and a Cornell graduate; but that did not make any difference in the earl's eyes. He had never heard of Cornell and would not have cared if he had heard of it. The earl was intensely English, and a devotee of sport. "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton," was his favorite slogan. But he did not call it a slogan. He called it an original remark, and each time he uttered it he thought he was giving a new idea to the world.

There was nothing the matter with Charles Stephen Langholme. He had assimilated himself so well to the prevailing style that there was nothing to him at all. He had no individuality. If you had removed Mr. Langholme from the world a thousand other Langholmes would have leaped in to take his inconspicuous place. And Lady Muriel, bound by tradition as she was, knew that she would have to marry Mr. Langholme unless he died, cheated at cards, or scored a "duck's egg" in the forthcoming match between Gentlemen and Players at the Oval.

"I'm Afraid It's Useless, Sammy."

Mr. Langholme, needless to say, was playing cricket for the Gentlemen.

Yes, there was that one point about Mr. Langholme. He was a good cricketer. He had a batting average of 47 for the season. If he went down ignominously before the bowling of the demon bowler, a coarse fellow named Hobbs, the earl's disgust might possibly induce him to consider some other man's suit—not Mr. Butts'.

"I'm afraid it's useless, Sammy," sighed Lady Muriel. "I've got to marry Charles."

"Why have you got to marry Charles?" demanded Sammy truculently.

"Because it's the proper thing," said his beloved. "If we got married there—wouldn't be any bridesmaids." And she looked at him piteously.

Sammy looked back at her and knew that he was "up against it." But that only set his Binghampton brains to working faster. Sammy had been a pretty good ball player in his day. Why shouldn't he make a cricketer?

A sleepless night produced a brilliant scheme. He would do it. He would! And he wouldn't say a word to anybody about it. He kept away from Muriel. But he induced the earl to send him a ticket of admission to the grand stand.

So, on the day of the match, behold Sammy, in cricketing flannels—which should have been a frock coat and a high hat—loitering near the pavilion, about which a number of flannel-clad men are congregated, Players and Gentlemen, all on good terms with each other, and each side waiting to "knock the stuffing" out of the other.

Behold, too, Mr. Langholme, testing his new bat and watching with cool disdain the low Hobbs, who is twisting a cricket ball lovingly in his hand.

Sammy, being in flannels, manages to gain entrance to the sacred inclosure during the Gentlemen's second inning. It should be explained that since the Players had scored 267 and the Gentlemen only 75, the Gentlemen were having their second inning on top of the first, the Players fully expecting to wallop them with one inning to their two, and a good many runs over. And when the next wicket fell Mr. Langholme, the Gentlemen's hope, who had made a creditable 18 in his first attempt, was to try to retrieve the situation.

"Hello, Butts! How did you get here?" inquired Langholme, with languid interest.

Sammy smiled. "Have a bracer, and I'll tell you," he said.

He led the unresisting Langholme toward the little booth behind the pavilion. Nobody was there, Sammy having squared the booth man. With a deft, unexpected movement of the arm, Sammy thrust a gag into Mr. Langholme's mouth. Then he threw him on the floor behind the booth and tied him fast with a rope that he had taken from about his waist.

Next instant shouts of "Langholme! Next man!" resounded, and Sammy saw one of the Gentlemen walking off the field with his wicket down.

Sammy hastily thrust on a pair of knee-guards, took the bat that lay beside the glaring, speechless Mr. Langholme, and walked out into the field.

"Langholme's had a stroke," he explained truthfully to the retiring batsman. "I've taken his place."

A minute later he was standing before his wicket, facing the demon Hobbs, 22 yards away. Beside him stood a second batsman. Sammy didn't know why he was standing there, but he didn't care, either. If he could hit the ball with a baseball bat, what couldn't he do with the club in his hand? He held it over his shoulder instead of putting it down in the block. The spectators gasped.

"Play!" yelled the umpire. The demon's arm went up above his head and the ball trundled slowly toward Sammy. Sammy let fly, and the ball went spinning across the field. Next instant the second batsman was at his side.

"Run, sir." he gasped. "Run!" And Sammy ran to the opposite wicket. Next minute the batsman was back at his side again.

"Run, sir!" he gasped.

So Sammy ran again, and then again. It was tiring work, and, not understanding that he was to stop when the ball was retrieved, he started a fourth time, and only got back to his crease without having his wicket down by a miracle of luck.

The demon scowled and sent down a high lob. Sammy, half way across the pitch, caught it and sent it beyond the boundary.

"Get back!" yelled the other batsman. "That's a boundary. That's a four hit."

Then Sammy understood something of the principle. When you hit the ball you ran, but if you could hit it beyond the boundary you scored four automatically. That was easier.

After that Sammy began hitting four every time. Of course, he had intervals of rest, because every fifth or sixth ball the field dissolved like a kaleidoscope and he found himself standing idly beside the bowler. But then again the field would be rearranged, and Sammy would face the demon Hobbs, who, much discomfited, would try him with new kinds of balls. There were fast balls and slow balls, spinning balls and breaking balls. Sammy didn't care. Each ball went to the boundary for four. The field was extended almost to the boundary to stop his strikes, but they failed. The ball went whizzing over their heads. In half an hour Sammy's score stood at 150, and the cheers of the spectators were continuous.

In two hours Sammy had passed the two hundred mark. He didn't care anything about Hobbs now, or any of the other bowlers. With his bat over his shoulder he just waited and then, shutting one eye, he swiped. The Players were demoralized.

But the Gentlemen did not win. They were some 200 points ahead, and still going strong, when time was called. And Sammy, still with the bat over his shoulder, found himself surrounded by a cheering, raving mob.

The first face he looked into was the earl's.

"My boy!" he gasped. "Why didn't you tell me? You have saved the honor of the day. The battle of Waterloo"—an impressive pause—"was won on the playing fields of Eton, sir. Is there anything—anything I can do for you to acknowledge your magnificent triumph?"

"Yes," said Sammy. "Give me Lady Muriel."

On the outskirts of the crowd Sammy saw Mr. Langholme trying to get near him. He looked as flustered as such a gentlemanly man could look, and he might even have been goaded into slapping Sammy, but he couldn't get near enough.

The earl looked at the lovers and relented.

"Take her, my boy," he faltered. "It is your right. For the battle of Waterloo—"

"Yes, I know," answered Sammy.

ORIGIN OF SURNAMES

COME FROM ANGLO-SAXON AND NORSE MYTHOLOGY.

Professor Weekley, in His Romance of Names, Has Dealt With the Subject in an Interesting and Instructive Manner.

The study as to the origin of surnames is more intricate than one who has never engaged in this diversion may suppose. The name of the present president of France, M. Poincare, appears to mean "square fist," which could hardly need a coat of arms to go with it. The greater part of our English names ending in "ing" are, according to Professor Weekley, in his Romance of Names, of Anglo-Saxon origin. Among these are Browning, Benning, Dunning, Kipling, Manning and Spalding. Among Anglo-Saxon suffixes greatly changed in their spelling and pronunciation are beald (bold), beort (bright), cytel (kettle), god (good), heard (strong), here (army), man (man), mund (protection), roed (counsel), ric (powerful), weald (ruling), weard (guard), and wine (friends).

The name Everett is from the Saxon Eoforhead, which also takes the form of Everhard; Gunter was Gundhere. Redmond, the name of the great nationalist leader, is not Irish, but is from the Saxon Raedmund; neither is the name Parnell Irish. "Mand" and "Mund" were often interchanged so that from Eastmund came both Eastman and Esmond. The name of the fat knight, Falstaff, comes from the Saxon Fastwulf, and Hubert, Hubbard, Hobart and Hibbert have as their ancestor Herebeorth (army bright), and Regenmund came to be Raymond. The name Cytel is connected with the Kettle or Cauldron of Norse mythology. It survives in such names as Chettle, Kettle, Chell and Kell, whence comes the name Kelsey, the "ey" tending to confirm the opinion that the original Kelsey was an islander. Many names of common folk, the plain people, have been ennobled. Prominent among these is Stewart or Stuart, which became royal with Walker, the Steward of Scotland, who married Marjorie Bruce in 1315. It stands for styward, where sty means pen, but is not necessarily limited to pigs.

"Perhaps the most interesting group of nicknames," says Professor Weekley, "is that of which we may take Shakespeare as the type. Incidentally we should be thankful that our greatest poet bore a name so much more picturesque than Cornaille (Crow) and Racine (Root). As Bardsley well says, it is impossible to retail all the nonsense that has been written about the name of Shakespeare—never a name in English nomenclature so simple or so certain in its origin; it is exactly what it looks—Shakespeare."

You and I.

One superintendent says that ever yet he hears a teacher, now and then say "Between you and I."—Ohio Educational Monthly.

Don't worry. We are all liable to fall into bad grammar occasionally even outside the halls of learning. "Between you and I" has become such an idiom that it looks all right, and then besides, it has a cultivated tone. We never hear it without suspecting the speaker is trying to run in some educated grammar on us. But the sad fact about this gentle invasion of cultured talk is that it has gotten a deep hold on society. We heard the other day a lady of the most fashionable style, and who gives club banquets say "between you and I," though, of course, we weren't the you she referred to. So we have become very charitable on account of these discrepancies, and our charity is enhanced by the report that a teacher now and then says "between you and I," although she does not refer to us, although we might hope she did.—Columbus Journal.

The Great American Plumber.

A heroic statue to the first American plumber as a companion statue to the figure of Liberty in New York harbor is the suggestion of Barry Pain, the English short story writer, who has been lecturing in this country.

"You have a magnificent supply of bathrooms in America," he said recently. "I never saw so many in my life before. Who started your United States bath tub movement? I am going to try to find out, and think the first American plumber should be given recognition. Are there no statues in his honor?"

Mr. Pain, who is nearly fifty, is making his first visit to the United States. He is famous in England as a writer of short stories and a contributor to Punch, but this year marks the first American edition of his work—three volumes of which have just been published.

New Beadstring Fastener.

The clasps or fastenings ordinarily employed on strings of beads, such as the popular pearl necklaces, are objectionable not only for insecurity in many instances, but also because they make a break in the continuity, and when they slip to the front of the wearer detract from the appearance. It has been suggested that possibly some form of fastener might be devised which would include as its elements bead structures corresponding to the other units of the necklace.—Scientific American.

SAFER CREDITS

The Regional Bank's New Measure Will Help Business Men in Many Ways.

Better credit, rather than an extension of credit, is the much-to-be-desired effect which the Federal reserve act will have on business. The new regional banks will exercise a useful function in assisting member banks to improve the character of their loans.

The most useful function in matters pertaining to health is the digestive system, for it is from this source we receive our daily help in renewing the waste portions of the body, keeping the blood pure and well supplied with red corpuscles, and the general condition up to Nature's standard.

Therefore, watch the digestion and at the first sign of weakness or distress see that immediate assistance is given. This can be efficiently supplied by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

It has a well known reputation as a tonic and appetizer and can thus be relied upon to help you regain your appetite, assist the entire digestive system and help Nature in the promotion and maintenance of health.

Make Hostetter's Stomach Bitters your first choice in any ailment of the Stomach, Liver or Bowels. You will find it well worthy of your confidence. Insist on having the genuine.

Wonderful Cuban Caves.

The wonderful caves of Bellamar, Cuba, to the east of Havana, attract the attention of the ambitious tourist. They are on a plateau as level as a table top, which presents no signs of the existence of such caves. After descending into the earth, however, a picture unfolds itself. Then come many passages, and at last the great "Gothic temple," 250 feet long and 80 feet wide.

Plural Titles.

All peers above the rank of baron are pluralists in the matter of titles, but the Duke of Buccleuch, who has just died, was a pluralist even in dukedoms. His forbears married the daughters and sisters of kings, and he himself was a lineal descendant of Charles II, to whom the family owed the highest title. Charles' son, the Duke of Monmouth, married Anne Countess of Buccleuch, and on their wedding day Anne—the duchess in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel"—persuaded Charles to make them Lord and Lady Scott of Whitchester, Earl and Countess of Dalkeith, and Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch. To the third duke came in 1706 another dukedom, that of Queensberry, and the late, the sixth, duke held them both, together with a marquisate, four earldoms, three viscounties and four or five baronies.—London Chronicle.

Horse Chestnut Tree in Bottle.

Horse chestnuts can be grown in a bottle of water. Use a bottle with a neck wide enough to hold the chestnut, adding water to just touch the nut and stand it in a window. Roots will form, followed by a stem and leaves. If the water is constantly supplied the tree can grow for years in the bottle.

Fireproof Wood.

To make wood fireproof, slack a small quantity of fresh lime and add water until it has the consistency of cream; stir well and add one pound of alum, 12 ounces of commercial potash and about one pound of salt. Stir again and apply while hot. Two or three coats will keep wood fireproof for many months.

PHYSICAL WRECK RESTORED TO HEALTH BY GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY

I feel it my duty to furnish you with my testimonial as to what your remedy Swamp-Root did for me when I was a physical wreck from kidney and bladder trouble.

Some years ago I was not able to do any work and could only just creep around and am satisfied that had it not been for Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root I would not have lived. After using the preparation for one month I was able to work some and when I had used $8.00 worth of Swamp-Root I could do a good day's work. I used about $10.00 worth altogether and would not take $10,000 for the good that it did me. I consider it a Godsend to suffering humanity for the diseases for which you recommend it and have recommended it to many sufferers.

Scotch Humor.

An old Scotch woman who had made a great deal of money by selling whisky was visited when on her death bed by her minister.

"And so, Molly," said the minister, "you tell me that you have all this money."

"Indeed, minister, I have," replied Molly.

"And you tell me, too," continued the minister, "that you made all this money by filling the noggin?"

"Na, na, minister," said the dying woman. "I dinna tell ye that. I made the maist of it by not filling the noggin."

Wrong Position for Sleep.

Sleep cannot knit up the raveled sleeve of care or do any other reparative knitting if the head is bent sharply to an acute angle with the collar joints. Frequently men and women who have slept in this supposedly objectionable fashion for years and years suddenly lose the capacity for sleep with no new discoverable reason. It is difficult to convince them that the elasticity and resiliency of youth has heretofore made up for their lifelong awkward pose.

RESINOL A HEALING HOUSEHOLD OINTNENT

Skunks Enemies of Caterpillars.

A new field of usefulness has been found for the much-ridiculed skunk in the fact that it is a vigorous enemy of the full-grown range caterpillars. Birds are of no service whatever in destroying these large caterpillars, but skunks devour quantities of them, and this is another reason why these little creatures should receive more consideration than they now do.

Made Slavery Hereditary.

The first formal recognition of negro slavery in Virginia was March 1, 1661, when the assembly declared that "negroes are incapable of making satisfaction for the time lost in running away, by addition of time," and slavery was made hereditary in Virginia in 1662 by an act of the assembly that the issue of slave mothers should follow their condition.

Preferred Her Pie in Pieces.

There was a rush from the train to a nearby restaurant, for refreshments, and, as usual, the men arrived first. When the one woman entered, she saw and heard the transactions where pie was bought for ten cents a quarter She desired a whole pie to take back to a party of friends, so she asked: "How much for a pie?"

"Sixty cents," was the glib reply.

"I'll take the four pieces of this one,' she said calmly, laying down four dimes.

The restaurant man hesitated, but three things caused him to come to the hasty conclusion that he had better cut the pie. The three things were, the set of the woman's chin, the sound of her voice, and the suppressed laughter of his customers.

She took up her pie—in pieces, saying in the same businesslike tone: "Thank you—my knife was dull."

Danger in Waiting.

Just because an Oregon scientist declares that old men do the best work is no reason, of course, why young fellows should put off contemplated achievements until the arrival of declining years. It may be that the man who accomplishes little in his early maturity will make up for the lack when he starts down the western slope of life. It doesn't sound reasonable, however.

Finest Dates Grow There.

Beyond the land of the Berbers, in the far south of Morocco, lies the great oasis of Tafilet, famous for its vast groves of date-palms. Here, for hundreds of square miles, the land is covered with thick growth of the tall, straight stems of the palm, and the product of these close-growing trees is enormous in quantity. They produce the finest dates in the world.

Gets Right Twist On Rheumatism

Makes Short Work of Cleaning Out Your Entire System—Aches and Pains Go Fast.

In S. S. S. You Get a Twist on Rheumatism that Settles It.

Many a rheumatic sufferer has been to the drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. and been handed something claimed to be "Just as good." Truly, to ask for bread and be given a stone is still in practice. If you are troubled with rheumatism in any form be sure to use S. S. S. and note its wonderful influence.

S. S. S. has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In five minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison; it dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to disolve, renders them neutral and scatters those peculiar formations in the nerve centers that cause such mystifying and often baffling rheumatic pains.

And best of all this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach. If you have drugged yourself until your stomach is nearly paralyzed, you will be astonished to find that S. S. S. gives no sensation but goes right to work. This is because it is a pure vegetable infusion, is taken naturally into your blood just as pure air is inhaled naturally into your lungs.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and ask for S. S. S.

You may depend upon it that the store that sells you what you ask for is a good place to trade. Write to the Swift Specific Co., 204 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their Book on Rheumatism.

Olive Industry Is Giving Millions To State

Oroville.—The value of the Olive Industry to California will be appreciated when it is realized that in 1914 the sum of $2,750,000 was realized to olive growers. According to statistics that have been very carefully prepared, the olive production for the year 1914 is placed at 27,500 tons; the average value per ton for oil and pickling purpose is accordingly $100.

The State has at the present time 11,000 acres of bearing olives and 10,000 acres of non-bearing olives. Within a comparatively short time, the bearing acreage of the State will be doubled while planting is proceeding in even a larger ratio than heretofore. It is expected that in 1915 the yield will be 30,000 tons, about 13,000 acres will be in bearing and more than 10,000 acres will be started. In a few years, if the present planting continues, the olive will rank among the most important of California's productions. In order to take care of the production that will soon be upon the market, a great educational campaign is being carried on. The first step in this campaign is California Ripe Olive Day which is to be celebrated on March 31st. It is to the interest of every one in the State that they join in this campaign, as the Olive Industry is apparently capable of an unlimited development throughout the State. With the market that is capable of development the annual return to the State from the Olive Industry should be $50,000,000 or more.

THE COUNTY FAIR

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer gets more out of the fair than anyone else. The fair to a city man is an entertainment; to a farmer it is education. Let us take a stroll through the fair grounds and linger a moment at a few of the points of greatest interest. We will first visit the mechanical department and hold communion with the world's greatest thinkers.

You are now attending a congress of the mental giants in mechanical science of all ages. They are addressing you in tongues of iron and steel and in language mute and powerful tell an eloquent story of the world's progress. The inventive geniuses are the most valuable farm hands we have and they perform an enduring service to mankind. We can all help others for a brief period while we live, but it takes a master mind to tower into the realm of science and light a torch of progress that will illuminate the pathway of civilization for future generations. The men who gave us the sickle, the binder, the cotton gin and hundreds of other valuable inventions work in every field on earth and will continue their labors as long as time. Their bright intellects have conquered death and they will live and serve mankind on and on forever, without money and without price. They have shown us how grand and noble it is to work for others; they have also taught us lessons in economy and efficiency, how to make one hour do the work of two or more; have lengthened our lives, multiplied our opportunities and taken toil off the back of humanity.

They are the most practical men the world ever produced. Their inventions have stood the acid test of utility and efficiency. Like all useful men, they do not seek publicity, yet millions of machines sing their praises from every harvest field on earth and as many plows turn the soil in mute applause of their marvelous achievements.

Campbell Won From Los Gatos

Campbell Union High added another feather to its already plumage-laden cap by plucking the rooster of victory from under the very noses of "The Cats" in an exciting see-saw swat fest Wednesday afternoon. No, not exactly fly-swatting, but still some flies were swatted and right on the nose. Oh, I forgot to inform you, it was a ball game, our last for the league season. Los Gatos came down like the Assyrian host only this time in a special electric car and used rooters instead of trumpet tooters to keep up their courage. You know defeat doesn't sound so bad when accompanied with bedlam, in fact it can't be heard a-tall. Yes, the score 12 to 9.

At no time did the Cats lead but the score was tied in the 7th inning when with the bases full the ball was heaved over third, letting all men in. Capt. Kennedy who had fanned 8 men in six ups then called Pierce to relieve him on the mound. Piece plucked a pair and held the visitors to 2 scores. Gardner's 3-bagger was the hit of the day.

Campbell made 11 hits and 2 sacrifices to the visitors' 8 hits.

An Easier Method.

Not Handsome but Wealthy Bride (asking the question for the hundredth time or thereabouts)—Are you sure, perfectly sure, dear Albert, that you married me for myself alone, and not for my money? Dear Albert (who is getting somewhat weary of answering the same old chestnut)—Of course I am! If it had been only your money I wanted I would have tried burglary or some easier way of getting it.

Mean Answer.

"Fred, dear, why are some women called Amazons?"

"Well, my dear, you remember our geographies told us that the Amazon has the largest mouth"—

But she went out and slammed the door before he could say any more.

Free Distribution

Planned for free distribution among people who are contemplating a trip to California and especially in the East and Middle West, the Southern Pacific Company has issued an edition of one hundred thousand copies of a folder showing views of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition on opening day.

The title of the publication is "Opening Day Views of San Francisco's Exposition Grounds, February 20, 1915, as they appeared to a Quarter of a Million People." Each page is about the size of a standard magazine and the folder itself can readily be mailed.

It shows among others a view of the Tower of Jewels, the Fountain of Energy, the New York State Building, the Avenue of Palms, the tower in the Court of the Universe, the tower in the Court of Abundance, the Palace of Horticulture, the Italian Towers in the Court of Flowers, and the Southern Pacific Building.

The half tones are large and clear, appropriately arranged. The lettering is neat and attractive. The text accompanying the pictures explains the views so that the fair visitor may know something about the arrangement of the buildings before he arrives in San Francisco.

For School Trustee

At the earnest solicitation of his fellow townsmen, Mr. J. E. Palmer has consented that his name should be presented for trustee of the Grammar School at the April election.

While the nomination has been entirely unsought by Mr. Palmer, he feels that it is the duty of every citizen to undertake his share of public duties when time and health will permit.

Mr. Palmer is well known thru his long residence in Campbell, during which time he has always given freely of his time and talents to all public affairs. As leader for many years of the Methodist choir, and as a member of the Glee Club he has taken active part in all musical lines, willingly giving his time to help the firemen with their minstrels, and to assist other organizations.

As manager of the Rochdale store Mr. Palmer made a wide acquaintance in the district, and his many friends will be glad of an opportunity to express their appreciation of his services for the community by giving him a large vote.

Methodist Church Notes

Last Sunday was a great day for us with a Sunday-School attendance of 170, the League attendance still climbing, good congregations, and a splendid response to the appeal in behalf of our benevolent causes. With subscriptions in proportion from those who were not present, we expect to meet all our apportionments in full.

Mr. and Mrs. Durrell and their son, of Los Altos, were callers at the parsonage this week.

The resignation of Supt. Wright was presented to the Sunday-School board Wednesday evening to take effect the first of April. On account of his wife's health, Mr. Wright finds it necessary to take his family away for a year. After passing resolutions of sympathy and appreciation, the board accepted the resignation with regret, deferring the election of a successor to next month.

The Sunday-School will observe Palm Sunday (March 28th) as Decision Day, and the pastor will give an opportunity at the morning service for the baptism of adults and reception into preparatory membership in the church. Mr. Herrington will sing "The Palms" at this service.

Mr. Lloyd will begin Sunday evening a series of addresses dealing with the events of Holy Week in the life of our Lord. These addresses will be continued every evening next week with the exception of Saturday. We would like to have our people lay aside as far as practicable all special social functions during this period that we may fittingly commemorate in these services and otherwise the sufferings and death of the Master preparatory to the triumph of the resurrection.

Yes, we're both lonesome and cross at the parsonage, with Mamma and the baby both gone for a month or more.

A Real Surprise

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Huntley of Sunnyside, was the scene of a surprise party last week, the occasion being the joint birthdays of Mr. Huntley and James, their respective years being 73 and 17.

Following an evening of games, refreshments of rolls, chicken sandwiches, cake and lemonade were served.

The following were present; Misses Winnie Bibb, Alice Talbot, Bernice Lloyd, Gladys Lowry, Amy Farley, Luella Thompson, Laura and Ruth Dunning, and Jerome Arends, Raymond Cowles, Edwin Kennedy, Charles and William Lloyd, Cecil Graves, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Donaldson.

This is the second surprise party at the Huntley home, the other having been given to Andrew recently, upon his birthday, when the same company with the addition of Millard Berry and Prof. Kammerer was present.

The theme for next Sunday morning will be "A Thief and Paradise." This is the last of the series of eight morning messages on the general theme "The Builders of the Cross." Come and make this last of the series a success, especially as it comes on Palm Sunday.

In the evening the Pastor has arranged for a "Stereopticon Service." The slides are a new set just received in San Francisco, "Japan in the Spring Time." Come with your friends, if you have no where else to go.
